Favorite summer 2011 must have: The maxi dress!

Trend/item that had the shortest time in your closet: The slouchy cargo. I've been a late adopter on this trend because it seemed like such a "soccer mom" look, but then I discovered the super soft tencel slouchy cargo from Sanctuary at Nordstrom this past Spring. I could wear them everyday -- so flattering and versatile. I dress them up with 4" high wedge sandals or wear them with flip flops.

Trend/item that has been in your closet the longest: My closet is in a constant state of purging, streamlining, and fine tuning. I believe in a small, but highly functional, mix and match wardrobe so nothing stays more than 2-3 years because I REALLY wear my clothes and shoes. Jewelry probably stays the longest.

Pi Phi influences: I didn't know I was going to be a stylist when I was in college, but I was surrounded by stylish sisters and alums and they no doubt influenced my style and fashion sense. And now, even though they live all over the world, I get to keep up with what they're wearing on Facebook.

College memory: I went to college in Arizona, but my family lived in Oregon. I really wanted to go home for Thanksgiving, but my parents said I would need to wait until Christmas. There were three other "orphans" in my pledge class that also weren't going home. We decided to take a road trip to visit my grandparents in what we thought was Palm Springs. Much to our surprise upon arrival, my grandparents vacationed during the winter in nearby Borrego Springs in a trailer park full of senior citizens! They arranged for us to stay in an unoccupied trailer for the long weekend. I was horrified and embarrassed, but my sweet sisters couldn't have been more excited about the opportunity to stay in a trailer park with a bunch of old folks! We had so much fun that weekend, made many new friends, and completely solidified our friendship.

Alumnae memory: I spoke at the Arizona Beta alum chapter in Scottsdale last year while I was on my book tour. Book tours are pretty grueling and VERY humbling as sometimes there are just a handful of people that show up to meet you and buy your book. Well, not the Pi Phis! There was a full house that day and a line to buy books. It was every bit as successful as my book signing at Powell's Books where the audience was my actual family. I was very moved by my Pi Phi sister's support.

Proudest professional moment: There have been a few moments that I'm particularly proud of, but nothing compares to when I hear one of my personal styling clients tell me (after a style makeover) that they feel more like themselves and more confident than they have in years or ever in their life. That makes me feel really good about what I do.

Proudest personal moment: Every moment when my children are present. I am so proud and grateful to be their Mom.
